

Bill could save town $1.8 million

by Arlene Surprenant
A recent development in funding the high school renovation project has Rep. James Miceli "confident" and Permanent Building Committee Chairman Diane Allan reportedly "elated."

According to Miceli, House Bill 5007, which he is sponsoring, would save the town of Wilmington $1.8 million in renovation costs. It would change Wilmington's reimbursement from the state from $3.5 million to $5.3 million.

Under the current formula, Wilmington's reimbursement amount is 41 percent of the interest and 50 percent of the principal. Wilmington's reimbursement would be changed to 60 percent reimbursement on both. This would mean a difference of $82,000 over the life of the bond issue.

Though it was a late file bill, House Bill 5007 was one of the first bills to be heard and approved by the Joint Committee on Education last Thursday. Miceli said he has a "firm commitment" that the bill would be in and out of the House Ways and Means Committee by February 20. This paves the way for it to go to the floor of the House, the Senate, and finally Gov. Michael Dukakis sometime in early March.

"I'm confident he (the Governor) will pass this," said Miceli. If he does, it will mean a "substantial" savings to the town in the form of local aid.

The bill has been amended to allow a few towns in similar circumstances, such as West Newbury and Provincetown, to be added to it.

Board of Health cites Polyvinyl for odor problem

by Arlene Surprenant
Polyvinyl Chemical Co. was issued a citation at a Board of Health public hearing Tuesday night and warned that legal action would be forthcoming should anymore chemical leakage occur at its plant on Main Street.

The hearing was triggered by an incident which occurred in the vicinity of Morse Avenue on February 4.

According to Air Pollution Task Force Chairman Anne Munro, who was present at the hearing, a "strong, sickening odor," later identified as ethyl acrylate, was released into the atmosphere. After complaints were filed by nearby homeowners, health officials went to the area that night and found the charges to be true.

Polyvinyl plant managers Don Nickerson and Don Carter explained at the hearing that employees were unloading a tank containing ethyl acrylate around 3:30 p.m. However, due to employee error, the hose that was attached to the tank wasn't capped so some of the chemical escaped.

Board of Health Chairman Domenic Tutela asked Polyvinyl representatives if they could guarantee there would be no recurrence of the leakage, something they couldn't do because the problem was attributed to human error.

Tutela told the representatives it was up to them to control the problem and, if it occurs again, the Board of Health will see that they don't use ethyl acrylate in Wilmington.

Vera Scolastico, a member of the task force and resident of Morse Avenue, later called Tutela's address "very effective" and pointed out that since chemical odors travel, this problem is one which affects the whole town.

Munro stressed that since "we do not know the low level effects of ethyl acrylate as a health hazard, it has to make you wonder" and be concerned.

Air Pollution Task Force members were pleased to see that some strong action was taken. According to member Odette Kent, they felt optimistic because Tutela "assured us repeatedly" that the Board of Health would be willing to take legal action because they "want the problem to stop 100 percent."

One difficulty in detecting odor problems, said Munro, is that one person may smell a strong odor and another may not. The task force feels that all citizens' complaints should be followed up. According to Munro, it is the Board of Health's policy that as long as there is a collaboration of at least two people, a complaint can be investigated. As a task force, they know that "the communication is there." They just want to be sure "the enforcement is there also."

The Air Pollution Task Force was created by Town Manager Buzz Stapeczynski on November 14 and has enjoyed "a six month lifespan," according to its chairman. Beside Munro, Scolastico, and Kent, it also includes members Judy Duggan, Elaine Ingram, and Jim Durkee (a former chairman of the Board of Health).

The task force was formed to deal with odor problems leading to air pollution. Members act as an "advisement committee" to the Board of Health and make recommendations on air pollution problems and how to deal with them.

In that capacity, members are looking ahead to mid-April when they will present a packet of their recommendations and citizen protocol to the Board of Health.

Two recent suggestions were brought to the Board's attention. Task force members suggested that when the board or police department investigate a complaint, they let the person complaining know there has been a follow-up. They also suggested a 24 hour answering service be established by the Board of Health so that any complaints can become a matter of record.

The task force will meet on Monday, March 4 at 6:30 p.m. to go over their procedures and regulations.

Ristuccia would donate land, money for arena

Developer Ben Ristuccia recently met with representatives of the Wilmington Arena Authority and offered to turn over the land on Route 38 and a "fixed amount of money" to them to follow through on building an ice arena for the town. Unconfirmed reports have set this figure at $500,000, the Town Crier has learned.

Though representatives of the Arena Authority indicated they would pursue this course of action, Ristuccia said, members of the authority could not be reached for comment.

In a brief interview, Ristuccia repeated his previous claim that "I made a commitment and I don't back down." He added, however, he is "fed up" with the way everything's been handled and is not sure what else he will do at this point.

One thing he has already done is seek land elsewhere for his arena, the profits of which are slated for cancer research.

In Andover, selectmen sought to add an article on the warrant of their annual town meeting to build the arena on one of three sites: a 113 acre area off Cross Street, a former gravel pit behind Andover High School, or by the Greater Lawrence Technical School.

According to Ristuccia, he has withdrawn the proposed article because he doesn't wish to build where there is such vocal opposition as there was in Andover.

School committee approves design of high school renovation project

by Arlene Surprenant
School committee members voted unanimously last Wednesday night to approve the close of the design phase of the $6.5 million renovation project. They also anticipate advertising bids for all phases of the construction which is slated to begin this July.

Several concerns were expressed to Diane Allan, chairman of the permanent building committee, and Wilson Rains, renovation architect, who were present at the meeting.

After Allan explained that the money allotted may not cover extras in furnishings, such as cafeteria tables and gym bleachers, and the paint necessary to complete the work, School Committee Chairperson Bridget Zukas said that that means the school committee will have to go to town meeting to get the funds. Allan stressed she is mainly concerned with getting the renovation completed within the set money limits.

Zukas said, in a later interview, she felt Allan was "very honest" in her approach and in letting the school committee know the problems her group faces. She only hopes that after the job goes out to bid, extra money will be found.

A prime concern of School Committee Member Linda McMenimen was what the students will do for winter sports with the gymnasium under construction in 1986.

School Committeeman Tony Accardi was concerned with other problems, such as unavailability of water or possible loss of heat, which may crop up during the actual construction.

Plans in works for new bridge

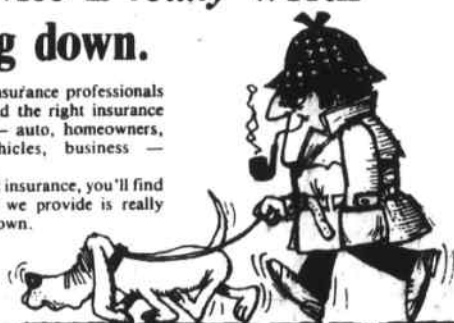

Plans for a new bridge over the railroad at Lake Street are now being made by the engineers of the Mass. Department of Public Works, Rep. James Miceli has reported. The plans are for a bridge 24 feet wide. This limit is being imposed because of the width of Lake Street at the old Middlesex Canal.

Miceli believes the call for bids will be made next December, and the new bridge will be erected in 1986.

Health center program links dental health and nutrition

Paul F. Caselle, D.D.S., a Wilmington dentist, and Janet Murray, R.D., M.S., Regional Health Center in Wilmington nutritionist, will team up for a free program in recognition of February as National Children's Dental Health Month.

"Nutrition and Dental Health: An Ounce of Prevention" will be presented Thursday, February 21 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Regional Health Center in Wilmington. There will be no charge for this program.

Dr. Caselle will discuss the causes, development, prevalence and prevention of children's tooth decay; the importance of good snack foods and evaluating the diet for good dental health. He will use slides to illustrate his talk.

Ms. Murray will present her portion of the program on the following national dietary guidelines:

Increase complex carbohydrates; decrease sugar and eat a variety of foods.

More specifically, Ms. Murray will explain the difference between simple and complex carbohydrates, which foods are high in complex carbohydrates and modifying recipes.

She will give parents suggestions on satisfying a "sweet tooth" with less sugar, use of sugar substitutes and modifying recipes.

Ms. Murray will also address the basic four food groups and the size and number of servings for children of all ages and meal and snacks planning to increase variety.

A question and answer session will follow the presentation.

Dr. Caselle will base portions of his talk on a conference he recently attended sponsored by the American Dental Association and General Foods on Nutrition and Dental Health where new research was presented.

Dr. Caselle is a graduate of Boston University and N.Y. University College of Dentistry. He completed a Family Dentistry Residency Program at the Forsyth Dental Center in Boston.

Ms. Murray graduated with top honors from Framingham State College with a B.S. in Food and Nutrition and she earned her M.S. in Nutrition with a concentration in education from Pennsylvania State College.

Although there is no fee, pre-registration is required by calling Community Health Education at 657-3910, ext. 567. Handouts and brochures will be available.

Stop Smoking Clinic

On Tuesday February 26, Middlesex Community College in cooperation with the Stop Smoking Clinic will offer two free introductory stop smoking sessions at 3:00 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. The first free sessions will each be an informative one-hour overview of the Stop Smoking Clinic's program at no cost or obligation. The introductory sessions will be held at the Burlington Campus in room 15. You may pre-register by calling 275-8910, ext. 225.

The Stop Smoking Clinic is a non-profit community service which helps people learn how to stop smoking. The month-long program, which meets twice weekly, is taught by highly trained former smokers who quit smoking through this program. The program uses group and individualized methods to help each participant overcome his or her smoking habit.

The program is unique in many ways. It enjoys a long-term success rate which is triple that of programs once recommended by national health experts. The Stop Smoking Clinic also offers a "Hotline" to each participant and graduate, providing constant support for their new smoke-free lives.

The Stop Smoking Clinic is proud of the fact that, since beginning the program, thousands of smokers have learned to break their habit.

You, too, can stop smoking. The Stop Smoking Clinic guarantees it.

Seniors dine out

February 14 was a sweetheart of a day for Wilmington seniors. A large contingent were guests of the Council on Aging at a dinner held at the Log Bridge Inn in Middleton.

Shut-ins were not forgotten either. Council on Aging coordinator Edith Cunningham arranged with 10 senior volunteers to have 40 chicken dinners, complete with red carnations and a red favor, delivered to those seniors who couldn't attend.

According to Council member Wilhelmina Dorrance, the people were "very happy to be remembered." And, she said, it's "especially nice to mention the good things we do."

Redevelopment Authority has article in town meeting

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington Redevelopment Authority (WRA) members met last Thursday to word an article for the annual town meeting. The article - an amendment to a 1966 article limiting the Authority's power to Jewell Industrial Park - would extend the jurisdiction of the WRA.

The area members hope to work on and improve, as covered in the article, is the broadest area possible. It runs down Route 38 from the Woburn to the Tewksbury line and covers Route 129 from Reading to Rocco's Restaurant, including Wilmington Town Center.

If passed, the article would enable the WRA to set up a Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) and become eligible for industrial revenue bonds. It would also afford members the opportunity to meet with the planning board in the hope of getting up an historical district and discuss what should be done with the town center area.

According to WRA Chairman Jay Donovan, they also hope to "offer a vehicle," in the form of below prime rate loans, to local businessmen in the town's center who wish to improve the physical appearance of their buildings and "the quality of life."

Now, said Donovan, his organization is starting "an education campaign" and talking with other town boards and committees.

WRA representatives met with Town Counsel Alan Altman last week. He was generally supportive, Donovan said, and suggested they make their article as broad as possible, at the same time recognizing the "political aspect" of what they're trying to do. Members will next meet with the Chamber of Commerce in mid March.

Letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

I am a terribly concerned taxpayer wondering if others feel as I do about the proposed condominium development which is to be voted on at the Special Town Meeting on March 18.

My first major concern is with the disturbing of such a large amount of land. What will happen to an area which already has a very severe water problem. The town officials are aware of these problems. Are there any written guarantees that we, in the surrounding areas, could receive to protect us from the immediate water problems that might be inevitable?

The second major problem is the increased amount of traffic in an already very thickly settled area with a lot of children. Will our children's safety be an important factor? Worst yet, will this open up the rest of the town to the possibility of other large parcels of undeveloped land to be faced with the very same problem, at which time it might be too late to stop it?

Precautions against flu

This has been a very unusual winter. With the combination of very warm, very cold and snowy weather, these drastic changes have caused an increase in flu cases among our elderly. At the present time it is close to epidemic stage. Seniors are advised to take precautions - one way the germ is passed on is through children who either have or are just getting over a bout with the flu - seniors are also advised not to visit hospitalized friends - a call to the hospital will do.

Dental care assistance

Secretary of Elder Affairs Richard Rowland is alerting Massachusetts residents over 60 to the availability of dental care assistance through the Mass. Dental Society in Wellesley.

Dr. Rowland informs that services may be given under a reduced fee program. Seniors can receive such treatment as full or partial dentures, cleanings, fillings, extractions, root canals, periodontist treatment, crowns, bridges and bondings.

Low income seniors who are not covered by either pre-paid dental insurance or Medicaid are eligible for dental care assistance, but those who are under Medicare may also qualify depending on financial status. For more information call the Mass. Dental Society 1-800-342-874.

It's a 'new ball game' at State House

A new face, for the legislature of Massachusetts, was described by Rep. James Miceli to the Tewksbury Lions Club on February 13. Miceli's keynote was the new responsibility of the state legislature and how this will affect the cities and towns of Massachusetts. He was speaking as a member of the Legislative Ways and Means Committee.

History has been made this year, he told the Lions.

For the first time in the history of state house politics, a sitting Speaker of the House of Representatives has not been re-elected. This, according to a historian of state house politics has never before happened.

Even when the Iron Duke, John Thompson was involved in very serious problems as Speaker of the House, and had very few commitments for his re-election, he was able to get re-elected to the Speaker's seat.

We are now operating with a new Speaker, a new Ways and Means Committee, and, most importantly, a new set of House Rules.

Under the old system, and the old rules that prevailed in the House of Representatives prior to the last few years, legislative bills did not even have to be printed before the votes were called. Members were sometimes forced to vote on bills and take a stand on legislation which they had never seen in print.

Under the old system legislative bills could not be discharged without an agreement from the Speaker. This was something which had been going on year after year, from time immemorial.

The present Speaker has given the House Ways and Means Committee an absolutely free hand to investigate the budget, to conduct hearings, to grill opponents to proposed legislation and to vote on the budget in an open atmosphere, said Miceli. Now, when the general membership of the House receives the Budget from the Ways and Means Committee, it will probably be the most open document ever reported on the floor of the legislature, he said.

"I, for one, felt it was refreshing to hear a Governor proposing a tax cut," Miceli said. "I for one, felt it was refreshing to hear the Governor addressing the state's problem of unfunded pension liabilities. This is a problem that amounts to billions of dollars."

Finally, Miceli said, he has proposed setting aside some monies for a rainy day.

"I find it ludicrous to hear legislators talking about eliminating the tax cut. They are proposing to use these monies to fund some of the state programs which they feel might be cut, by the Big, Bad Guys in Washington," he said.

Miceli said he thought it would be nice for some of these legislators to be able to sit on the Ways and Means Committee. Then, he said, they would hear how we have ferreted out from various secretaries and commissioners, the fact that hundreds of employees do not appear on the state payroll records.

If the money from Washington were to be eliminated, many of these same secretaries and commissioners would be trying to force the legislature into spending state dollars, to keep those employees on the state dole, Miceli said.

"What we should be talking is eliminating the fat, and looking forward to increasing the tax reduction portion of the Governor's proposal," he said.

"I say this after looking at the books, and seeing the sorry state of the state's financial picture," said Miceli. "I have seen the accelerated program which was put on the books by the legislature and the Governor."

The program, he said, included the unpardonable sin of taking lottery monies away from the towns and using it to balance the state's books.

Once again, according to Miceli, the Commonwealth has come up with record breaking numbers for Local Aid, to the 351 cities and towns.

"Some of us on the Ways and Means Committee have told Frank Keefe, the Secretary of Administration and Finance, that we feel the numbers regarding growth, and Taxes on Revenue have been under estimated. When the final numbers are in we want the extra dollars returned to the towns," Miceli said.

"We have talked about allocating local dollars intelligently. Decisions have to be made, as to where cuts can be implemented," Miceli told the Lions. The Legislature, he said, has recently given the towns a broader latitude than they have had in the past.

As an example, he said, the Legislature has dictated, to a broad extend, what the County budgets should be.

"Some of us got together, and had legislation passed that turned this function over to the local governments, the towns and cities that make up the counties," he said.

For instance, Miceli said, if the cities and towns of Middlesex County were to decide that more firemen, more policemen, keeping fire stations open, and taking care of Capital Equipment was more important than spending two or three hundred thousand dollars for the maintenance of County Government, they could do so. They would have to have, of course, a majority of the votes in the towns that send members to the County Advisory Board. These people could vote in compliance with the wishes of their towns, and the vote would be valid.

Fifty-one percent of the "weighted vote" of the cities and towns could say "Let's not do that" and "Let us spend the money locally," Miceli explained.

"That is the way it could be," he said. "This is one cost that is assessed directly on the property tax of the towns. County governments depend on the local taxation, and the money comes directly from the local real estate tax."

The Local Aid Formula is something to be discussed, said Miceli.

This is the formula for the monies that the state sends back to the cities and towns. The basic rule is something called the Needs Program, and this penalizes many cities and towns, he said.

"If you live in a community with a lot of old housing, with a lot of subsidized low income housing, with many Aid to Dependent children in the schools, and with bi-lingual students you make out much better than residents of a community whose population does not contain, to a great extent, this component of population," Miceli said.

This gives greater advantage to the cities, as opposed to the towns, for Local Aid Dollars. This formula is geared to the cities. Low Aid Housing goes to the cities as a result.

According to Miceli, under this type of formula the Tewksburys, the Wilmingtons, the Pembrooks, the Andovers and the Hansons cannot compete with the cities of Boston, Lynn, Lawrence and Lowell.

For the first time the Ways and Means Committee has made the governor, reveal this formula, Miceli told the Lions.

"The new administration of the House of Representatives, and the new blood in some of the key committees makes this possible," said Miceli. "It will, I think, reveal to the voters of this Commonwealth, a new way for the state legislature to act responsibly."

Miceli among the Lions
When Rep. Jim Miceli addressed the Tewksbury Lions Club on Feb. 13, one Lion remarked that it was the longest speech on record at that club. The accompanying article is based on that talk.

Two students receive academy nominations

Congressman Edward J. Markey has placed the names of two local students in nomination for appointment to a U.S. Service Academy.

Markey nominated Scott Thornton, son of Leo and Eleanor Thornton of Hillcrest Rd., Tewksbury for admission to the U.S. Military Academy and nominated Brian Wetzler, son of Richard and Phil Wetzler, of Fairmont Ave., Wilmington for admission to the U.S. Naval Academy.

Thornton is currently a senior at Tewksbury Memorial High School and Wetzler is currently a student at Wilmington High School.

Each of Congressman Markey's nominations have been forwarded to one of the four service academies - West Point, Annapolis, the Air Force Academy, or the Merchant Marine Academy - where the final selection process continues into the spring.

The four academies have review boards which evaluate the congressional nominees and other candidates from around the country. These boards make the final decision on appointments to the service academies.

"The strict guidelines used to screen candidates make the competition for congressional nominations extremely keen," Markey said.

"These students who have been nominated as candidates for the U.S. Service Academies have demonstrated outstanding character. In addition, these young people have strong scholastic records, exceptional leadership ability and have been actively involved in a variety of community and extra-curricular activities," Markey adds.

"I am very proud of these young people. I congratulate them and all of the other fine candidates for admission to our U.S. Service Academies," Markey said.

Alarm foils break at Tewksbury Town Hall

Tewksbury Police investigated an apparent break into the town treasurer's office in town hall last Friday night. According to reports, someone broke a side window to the office shortly after 9:30 p.m. on February 15 and promptly fled the scene.

According to Lt. Walter Jamieson, an audible alarm that rang after the window broke apparently scared off the intruder(s). The audible alarm rings outside the building as well as in the police station.

According to Lt. Jamieson, a police cruiser stationed at North and East Streets, a short distance from town hall, responded to the scene in less than a minute. However, there was no one at the scene when the cruiser arrived.

Reports indicate that no entry to the office was gained.

Interfaith Choir seeks new members

The Interfaith Choir of Tewksbury will start rehearsals on Sunday, February 24 for its upcoming spring concert.

The 7:30 p.m. rehearsals will be held at the Congregational Church in Tewksbury Center. Familiar and new voices alike are invited to join the group for the concert.

The experienced choir, under the direction of Norm DeMarais for the last five years, will feature religious and secular pieces in the spring concert.

Selections for the "Music in the Air" theme, are expected to range from "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and "I'll Walk with God" to "Let Me Call You Sweetheart." Audiences will also enjoy lighter songs like "We're the Men of the Chorus" and some other surprises which will result in a well-rounded program containing music for everyone.

While some people think the choir is only for Tewksbury residents or for people who are currently singing in a church choir, such is not the case. Actually, members come from many communities. Some travel from as far away as Nashua, New Hampshire. Also, many people do not sing in any other formal choir. They use Sunday night as an escape time to relax with some good company and share a love of music and singing.

Trombly wins Wilmington school bus contract

by Arlene Surprenant
Trombly Motor Coach Service Inc. has been awarded the new school bus contract, according to Business Manager Frank Antonelli. School Committee members offered Trombly a three year contract last Wednesday, a contract which goes into effect September 1, 1985.

Trombly won out over two other companies: Wellesley Motor Coach Co. of Framingham, which has held the contract for the past six years, and Auto Bus Inc. from Avon. Trombly held the school's contract for 18 years before Wellesley.

The school committee, said Antonelli, asked for three different options: a one year bid, a three year bid, and a five year bid. Trombly was lowest on the three year bid.

In comparing Trombly's three year bid with Wellesley's there was an annual difference of $43,000. Over a three year period, Trombly will cost $130,000 less than Wellesley would have.

Of special interest, stressed Antonelli, is the fact that next year's buses will be no older than five years old and will come equipped with radios. Seat belts are not a requirement at this time, though Antonelli did say the town of Sudbury may be the first to make this a priority next year.

School committee members are looking forward to working with Trombly and, said Antonelli, are "optimistic he will provide good service as he has in the past."

Footwear firm is fiscally fit

The bandwagon of physical fitness that everyone is climbing on these days has resulted in a banner year of profits for Converse, Inc.

The company currently has its headquarters on Fordham Road in Wilmington.

Recently, Converse reported that sales for the year ending December 31, 1984 were $265,598,000, an increase of 27 percent over fiscal 1983 results. These sales were not only the highest in the Company's history, but the percentage increase was also the largest ever experienced by Converse in any previous year.

Net income rose 34 percent to $14,467,000. Earnings per share were $2.54 for the year vs. $2.07 in 1983. Both net income and earnings per share were also a record for the Company.

Richard B. Loynd, Converse chairman, attributed the record revenue growth to sales increases in the court shoe area. In basketball shoes, sales were up 40 percent. This substantial increase was due to two major factors. First, the overwhelming acceptance of the new Star Tech TM shoe introduced in early 1984. This product was the first basketball shoe to be completely designed and tested biochemically. The second reason was the continued strong sales of canvas All Star. This product continued to gain sales, in both the domestic and international markets, as a shoe for casual streetwear. Sales of tennis shoes also were up 19 percent after a remarkable increase in 1983. The Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert product lines were largely responsible for this increase.

Loynd also identified two new market areas as important contributors to the 1984 record sales. Activewear products, which were new to the Company in 1984, approached $10,000,000 in sales. In addition, the international market provided sales of over $30,000,000, more than double the 1983 totals.

John P. O'Neil, Converse president, commented on the Company's profits, attributing a portion of the gain to the Company's ability to control their SG&A expenses as a percentage of revenues. O'Neil pointed out that, despite high advertising and promotional expenditures related to the 1984 Olympic Games, Converse had actually been able to reduce the ratio by a full percentage point. This trend is expected to continue in 1985.

O'Neil also pointed out that order backlog at December 31, 1984 stood at a record level, for the date, of $43,732,000. This was seven percent above the prior year. He cautioned however, that there had been a recent softening in the "at once" orders from retailers. He attributed this to inventory adjustments and flat sales on the part of these retailers.

Converse is the largest U.S. manufacturer of athletic shoes and markets a wide variety of models designed for basketball, running, field and racquet sports. In addition, Converse offers a complete line of activewear developed to complement the Company's footwear products.

School board retains 64 as passing grade

by Elaine DePasquale

A change in the grading system and three new high school courses gained a nod of approval from Tewksbury's School Committee on February 6.

Originally taken up at the January 30 meeting, the requests left the school committee with some unanswered questions, and so High School Principal William DeGregorio was on hand on February 6 to explain them.

The item which drew the most discussion was a proposal to change the lowest passing grade for high school students to 60 and to institute a plus and minus system for grading.

While committee members were pleased with the concept of plus and minus grades, lowering of the passing grade met staunch opposition.

"To lower the passing grade would encourage mediocrity," said Chairman Lou Carciotti at the January 30 meeting. "All you would have to do to get into college is write a check."

Committee members settled upon a compromise which retained 64 (D) as a passing grade and 63 and below as failing or F and which allowed for the institution of pluses or minuses in the grading system.

The attempt will be made to introduce the changes into all four high school grades in the fall.

Committee members also frowned upon a proposal to change the grade weighting system from 20 per cent homework 20 per cent class participation and 60 per cent testing to 10 per cent homework 20 per cent class participation and 70 per cent testing. The present system was retained.

A request for an expansion of a program which currently allows high school students to use one study period a day to tutor elementary students in computer basics found favor with the school committee. The program now involves 18 high school students and DeGregorio would expand it to include 25 students and possibly other areas than computer science.

The committee also approved a new course in robotics, dubbed Electronics II, and Computer Science which would allow the students to build their own computer and a Great Authors course for English students.

TABS revitalizing science curriculum

by Elaine DePasquale

A report on the progress of a two-year TABS program for Tewksbury junior high students was presented February 6 to the school committee by Junior High School Principal Richard Griffin.

Griffin is the site coordinator of the program, which was implemented in eighth grade classes this year in cooperation with the Merrimack Education Center in Chelmsford.

Tewksbury, Griffin said, is one of three towns selected to participate in the program. In Tewksbury, he said, Problem Solving Skills in Science was the subject matter selected. Burlington is involved in Word Processing and Lunenburg in Research in Study Skills.

The goal of the program, Griffin told committee members, is to revitalize curriculum areas in the school "that have been problematic" and to effect a more equitable emphasis on three important facets of teaching a science course — content, process and technology.

"Success equals content and process enhanced by computer technology," he said.

At some point, he said, he hoped it would be possible for the three participating schools to share what they had learned in each of their respective subjects.

Griffin said that the program currently involved six science classes as controls and six as variables and that four teachers were participating.

Students, he said, were learning problem solving skills such as framework setting and methods in which to handle different types of problems such as collational, experimental, comparative or decision making problems.

The program would also enhance staff development, he said, in areas such as computer competency, analysis of process and framework setting, choice of content area, and selection of related hardware and software.

The concrete product of the program, Griffin said, was the development of teaching modules using computer software.

"The first few modules are now in progress in science classes," Griffin said, "and while we have no hard results yet, the project has given us a good opportunity to take a look at good points and weak points in our science program."

Open house changed

The open house for Tewksbury Memorial High School, which had been scheduled for March 27, has been changed to March 5, a Tuesday night.

This open house will be specifically designed for the parents of eighth grade students. The open house will serve as an orientation evening where course offerings and the total curriculum for grades nine through 12 will be discussed.

WE BUILD CONDOMINIUMS...

... Similar to the one featured here. Clean and neat, with special attention being paid to landscaping, the environment and structural conformity with other dwellings in the area, our homes are typically occupied by elderly couples, young executive couples and singles such as technicians and airline stewards. Although many of these owners are "transferred in" by large companies some owners of these affordable homes will be our young hometown marrieds and singles who would otherwise be forced to relocate in an apartment in one of the cities.

A complete survey of our condo areas is always done in advance, taking care that access roads, bridges, sewer and gas are in proper position to insure convenience, safety and an even distribution of traffic; consideration of our new neighbors is a must with us.

...and speaking of that, one of the amenities of the condo is the tennis court and typically, whom do you suppose gets the most use from the tennis court? The owners? No! The neighbors do!

Wildcats fall in OT, 78-74

Brian Dick's basket with 40 seconds left in overtime and Tim Boudreau's two free throws with 15 seconds to play gave the Tewksbury High School Redmen a 78-74 victory over the Wilmington Wildcats in MVC Boys' Basketball action at Tewksbury Tuesday night. The loss gives the Redmen a shot at a tourney berth if they defeat Lawrence Friday night, while the Wildcats remain winless on the MVC season.

Coach Dave Orndorff's Cats refused to quit however, coming back from a 15 point second quarter deficit to lead by two points in the final stanza.

The Wildcats were led by Bob DeSantis' 22 points, while Bill O'Donnell chipped in with 13. Mike Bosia (29) and Tim Boudreau (26) were the Redmen leaders.

O'Brien's Roofing captures first place

O'Brien's Roofing beat Towne Auto, 59-57 to clinch first place and a bye in the upcoming playoffs. Kevin O'Brien's layup with seven seconds remaining in the game capped off the victory for the Roofers.

The hard fought contest saw

O'Brien's go up by as many as nine points, 32-23 before an undermanned Towne squad cut the lead to 35-31 at the half.

TJ Caveney hit a layup and a jumper a minute into the second half to knot the score at 35-35. The teams see-sawed the rest of the half until O'Brien's eased itself a four point lead with just under three minutes to play.

From there the Roofers decided to run some time off the clock, but the strategy backfired. TJ Caveney stole the ball from Todd DiRocco and went in for a layup to cut the lead to 57-55.

On its' next possession, O'Brien's hurried the shot and committed a rebounding foul. Ed Caveney converted both free throws to tie the score at 57 all. O'Brien's then ran 1:20 off the clock to set up Kevin O'Brien's winning hoop.

The balanced scoring of O'Brien's was the big difference in the game. The Roofers got points from eight different people, with Kevin O'Brien paving the way with 15 points followed by Ron Wallace, Paul Garrity and Dave, Libby all of whom had 10 apiece. TJ Caveney led all scorers with 22. Ed Caveney had 20 for Towne and Brian Irwin chipped in with 11.

Shriners All Star alumni

The Boston College Eagles squad that thrilled fans across the country on New Year's Day with their hard-fought victory over the University of Houston in the Cotton Bowl boasts 27 players who had their start in past Shriners High School Football Classic games.

Chief among them is Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie, one of the stars in the 1981 Shrine game. Flutie, a Natick High School all-star, led the Shriners South squad to a come-from-behind win in that contest and captured the offensive Most Valuable Player award as a result.

Saying, "I hope the BC people will now give me a chance to play quarterback," Flutie, who was projected to be a defensive back at BC, was moved to the number five quarterback position by Coach Jack Bicknell due to Flutie's outstanding performance in the Shrine Classic. Flutie contends the Shriners game is where it all began.

BC Cotton Bowl teammates who are also Shrine Classic alumni include Cotton Bowl offensive MVP Steve Strachan, who rushed for 91 yards and two touchdowns in the Bowl game, and who is a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar Athlete.

Darren Flutie, Doug's brother, an alumnus of the 1984 Shrine game and also a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar Athlete, led the Eagles in yards per carry and yards per reception this year, scoring two touchdowns in the big Holy Cross game.

BC tri-captain Scott Harrington, a three-year starter on the Eagles defensive line; Scott Gieselman, a two-year-straight All-East tight end who caught 78 passes in the last two seasons and Steve Trapilo, two-year starter member of BC's "secret service" (offensive line), are also Shrine game alumni members.

Others are Shawn Halloran, back-up quarterback for the past two years; Darren Twombly, who is expected to move into BC's starting lineup in 1985; Mark Bardwell, Peter Casparriello, Paul Digeronimo, Rich Faro, John Galvin, Joe Giaquinto, Paul Holey, Karl Kreshpane, Eric Lindstrom, Mark MacDonald, Ken Moriarty, Brendan Murphy, Sean Murphy, Rick Nickeson, Roy Norden, David Nugent, Rorery Perryman, Todd Russell and Jeff Simpson.

This year, the Seventh Annual Shriners High School Football Classic, co-sponsored by the Shriners of Aleppo Temple in Wilmington and the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association, will showcase talents of a new crop of young players when the North and South teams meet on Saturday, June 22, at 4 p.m. at Boston College's Alumni Stadium, Chestnut Hill. The teams are tied three all going into the game.

Game Director Jim O'Connor, who co-founded the game seven years ago, says, "once again, 88 fine young athletes from Eastern Massachusetts will be taking time out of their active lives to help young people less fortunate than themselves - the burned and crippled children in Shriners hospitals. This act of concern is an example of how these young men are winners in every way."

The Classic is the most recent of 53 Shrine games, both high school and college, held yearly throughout the country. These are headed by the collegiate East-West Shrine game, which began in 1925 and is played in San Francisco each January.

In New England, the Shrine Maple Sugar Bowl which pits high school all-stars from New Hampshire against those from Vermont, has been played for 27 years each August in Hanover, New Hampshire.

All games benefit the Shriners' three burned and 19 orthopedic hospitals across North America. Last year's classic netted $39,000 for the Shriners Burns Institute in Boston and the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Springfield.

Rainbow Girls — fun, fellowship and opportunities

by Arlene Suprenant
Wilmington has its Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, church youth groups, school clubs, and many sports activities for young girls. One special organization in existence in our town since 1943 is the Rainbow Girls, under the aegis of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Rainbow Girls is a worldwide fraternal organization open to any girl aged 12 to 20, regardless of color or creed. According to Mother Advisor Alice Riley, Wilmington has a "very small assembly," but the members are extremely active. Their calendar is filled with Thursday night meetings, service projects, and social functions, as well as the more formal initiation ceremony of new members and the beautiful installation ceremony of new officers, held three times a year.

High on this year's social agenda is a membership dance slated for March 1. It will be held in the Masonic Temple on Church Street, where their meetings usually take place.

In seeking to increase its membership this year, Alice said each girl must be a "membership committee of one" to reach prospective members and make them feel at home in the organization.

Many girls enjoy the activities that are an important part of Rainbow. In the past, these have included hayrides, bowling, slumber and sledding parties, an annual beach party at Crane's Beach and a day trip to Faneuil Hall, as well as a Surprise Day (where the girls were picked up early in the morning and taken to a come-as-you-are-breakfast) and other planned events.

Members join with Rainbow Girls from all over the state at the annual Rainbow Ball held in a Boston hotel and at the annual convention usually held in April. They also attended a church service together on Rainbow Sunday, sometime in March or April.

What, exactly, is Rainbow Girls? It is primarily a character building service organization with teachings based on the Bible. Once a girl joins, she has the option of becoming one of the line officers known as Faith, Hope, Charity, and the Worthy Associate Advisor.

The top officer is known as the Worthy Advisor, who serves in that capacity for three months. During her time in office, she plans all the activities as well as a service project.

All the officers dress in long white gowns and wear a tiara at each meeting. This whole process of moving up "becomes prestigious a little bit because you do know you're going to the top," says Advisory Board Chairman Judy DiPalma.

Nine members, all either past

Rainbow Girls, or members of Eastern Star or the Masons, make up the present Advisory Board. These members include Judy DiPalma, Susan Martin, Charles Glavin, Gordon Dryden, Dorothy Dryden, Deborah Swain, Brenda Carta, Patricia Jackson, and Christine Morrissey. They meet once a month in an advisory capacity and supervise the meetings and chaperone outside activities.

Heading the whole organization is the Mother Advisor, a sort of mother figure for the girls. Alice Riley of Reading is the newly installed Mother Advisor, replacing Elaine Glavin who previously served in that capacity for 13 years. The Mother Advisor, according to Judy, "oversees everything and is the helper who's always there for the girls." Alice Riley certainly comes prepared as she has been involved in Rainbow for over 30 years. She was a Mother Advisor in Reading, a member of that Advisory Board, and a Grand Deputy with charge over five different assemblies.

According to Alice the girls are encouraged to strive for perfect attendance and are rewarded with merit bars and other awards. The highest honor is attaining the Grand Cross of Color, given to a percentage of girls each year.

What do girls gain from belonging to Rainbow Girls?

Judy DiPalma points out the many rewards of joining. The Wilmington chapter of Rainbow Girls provides "great wholesome activity girls can get involved in, depending on how active they want to be."

"One of the beautiful things," says Judy, "is that when younger girls join, they have older girls to look up to as an example or role model." Younger girls are almost immediately taken under an older member's wing, almost as in a big sister relationship. This is seen in her own family. When her younger daughter Pamela joined last year she had a lot of help from her older sister Paula, who had already attained the office of Worthy Advisor.

Also, said Judy, girls gain confidence, poise, an ability to speak in front of others, and a sense of responsibility — all of which will stand them in good stead the rest of their lives. Judy points proudly to the fact that a former Miss Tewksbury and Miss Watertown were both Rainbow Girls. And they attributed part of their winning to the poise and confidence they gained in this organization.

Perhaps the most unique aspect of Rainbow Girls is the closeness of the girls and the lifelong memories members carry away with them when they reach their Majority Degree at age 20. In Wilmington, alone, there are many mothers who once belonged to Rainbow and who, in turn, encourage their own daughters to join.

One such person is Lorraine Mills. Lorraine served as Worthy Advisor in 1954 and, more recently, was a member of the Advisory Board. All four of her daughters — Catherine, Susan, Marilyn, and Deborah — have belonged to Wilmington's chapter. Both Deborah and Marilyn were Worthy Advisors, with Deborah presently serving on the Advisory Board.

Lorraine's fondest memories are of the friendships she made and both "the serious and fun moments." She feels that "in a lot of ways, Rainbow Girls may not be a 'top priority' today, as there is 'so much peer pressure' to do other things. Also, she says, girls seemed to be more conscientious about Rainbow in the past. She always hoped that her daughters would enjoy Rainbow as much as she did, and 'get something special out of it.'"

Celia Cornish served as Worthy Advisor in 1961 and was also on the Advisory Board. According to Celia, Rainbow Girls is a "very worthwhile organization" which changes "awkward little 12 year olds into beautiful young ladies."

She feels her own daughters Catherine, Cynthia, and Celia Marie profited from being members. Cynthia, the one who got the most involved, was Worthy Advisor in 1980 and went on to assume the duties of a state officer. Celia Maria was Worthy Advisor in 1984.

Celia remembers that 25 years ago "not much was going on" so Rainbow Girls served as an outlet and an opportunity to get dressed up and socialize with other girls. Today, she says, girls are very busy and pulled in many different directions. She feels her own girls learned how to speak with confidence, be outgoing, and learned "the fine art of being a young lady."

Along with everything else, members of Rainbow Girls learn how important it is to help others. Past projects have included making Thanksgiving baskets, visiting children and disabled persons in hospitals, and helping to raise funds for charities and organizations such as the Shriners' Burns Institute. During visitations, says Mother Advisor Alice Riley, the girls learn "to appreciate so much more of the things that we have."

The girls are also encouraged to act as hostesses at local events which helps them achieve that much more recognized poise and confidence.

It's true that Wilmington has many organizations for girls. But few offer the rainbow of fun, fellowship and opportunities available through Rainbow Girls.

Chamber of Commerce meets Feb. 26

Lisa Judd of Digital Equipment Corporation will be guest speaker at the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce Breakfast Meeting at Stelio's Restaurant on Tuesday, February 26 at 7:30. Members and guests are invited to attend.

Ms. Judd will focus on what an owner-manager needs to know about computers, including the latest developments in computer usage and how they can help a business. They will hear what an "electronic office" is; how it can improve office productivity and how to make an intelligent judgement on the type of computer which would best serve their needs. There will be time allotted at the end of the presentation for questions from the membership.

Reservations for the breakfast are necessary and may be made by calling the Chamber office (657-7211) by Friday, February 22.

Any firm or individual sharing a common interest in the promotion of the general business interest and the civic, economic and social welfare of the citizens of Wilmington is welcome to apply for membership in the Chamber of Commerce.

Oil money

State Rep. Jim Miceli, right, recently presented Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski with a state check for $25,000 to help pay for new oil tanks at Wilmington High School. Miceli had previously landed the town $400,000 emergency appropriation for the clean-up of oil which leaked from the old oil tanks.

Town receives $75k for new oil tanks

by Arlene Suprenant

A check in the amount of $75,000 was presented to the Board of Selectmen last week to cover the costs of the two new underground tanks at the high school. The check was the result of successful efforts by Rep. Jim Miceli to obtain state funding.

According to Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, the tanks have already been installed and are now in use. All that remains to be done is "probably" some asphalt to cover the holes.

Miceli also reported that a traffic light for the High Street area may be included in the state budget and he hopes to see something significant done with open space use in the next two years. He explained the state will now allow an 80 percent reimbursement on new land taken, as opposed to a previous 50 percent reimbursement. This allows for some long range planning in creating open space land use.

Miceli feels "very strongly" that something has to be done to preserve land and prevent open spaces from disappearing. This was a motivating factor in proposing an article for the Special Town Meeting to take land as town forest and place it under the jurisdiction of the Conservation Commission.

Land use also topped the rest of the selectmen's agenda.

Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) representative Jay Donovan presented several MAPC topography maps requested by the Planning Board. These maps were used in a recent land use study and may be used as a tool to study growth patterns in Wilmington from 1971-1980 and to show where major growth is taking place. According to the maps, increase in growth is most obvious in the urban category, which includes industry, commerce, residential areas, and transportation.

Selectmen Chairman Jim Stewart pointed out that this study "will tie in nicely with cataloguing our own land" and will let us know "if we should have already stopped" further development in Wilmington.

Donovan recommended having a representative from the MAPC sit down with the board and go over town land use as he feels there is a "real problem in terms of growth and being able to monitor that growth."

Attorney Jim Banda spoke on behalf of a client who wished to regain land taken by the town in 1979 for non-payment of taxes. According to a town bylaw, the person wishing to redeem land must pay all unpaid back taxes, interest, and expenses which have accrued. Also, the owner has the first chance to redeem the land.

According to Banda, the reason for allowing land to be redeemed is to get it back on the tax rolls.

One unfair aspect, said Selectman Bob Cain, is that owners may redeem land for a minimal sum but resell it at a large profit.

A motion was made and passed to grant the right of redemption in this case.

Two articles dealing with official map issues were presented to the board by Dan Gillis and placed on the annual Town Meeting warrant.

One article would correct the official map by replacing a portion of Railroad Avenue which was omitted. This would allow owner Joe Balestrieri to turn over that land as a gift to his son Gary.

The second article would amend the official map to allow a building permit to be issued to Carl Giangregorio without the need of Board of Appeals action. This would allow his son the opportunity to build on the St. Paul Street parcel.

Gillis, speaking on behalf of the Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA), also presented another article for the annual Town Meeting warrant. This article would turn over the old South School to the WHA as an "insurance policy" in case it is needed as one of the new low to moderate income homes to be built in town. If not used, the school would revert right back to the town for other use.

Selectmen, in accepting the article, pointed out there was "considerable interest" in that school and two other interested parties have already submitted articles pertaining to it.

Condo plans submitted

Preliminary plans for condominium housing off Burlington Avenue were submitted to the Wilmington Planning Board this week. The plans are being prepared by Andover engineer Steven Stapinski.

One hundred and eleven units are being planned, to sell at $120,000 each. There are 53 acres behind the old Fred Roberts house, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Comerford. The Roberts estate dates back to the early decades of this century. Mr. Roberts was a prominent candy manufacturer, and had about 100 acres around his home.

Stapinski is preparing the plans for James DeCarolis, Tewksbury builder. Mr. DeCarolis a week ago visited the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners to begin discussions about constructing a sewer which would connect the housing project at Deming Way with the principal sewer, near the Boston & Maine Railroad.

That sewer would also be extended into the area of the proposed condominium construction, Stapinski said, crossing the wetlands around Mill Brook at a narrow place. The Roberts estate contains 15.7 acres of wetlands Stapinski told the board.

The condominium plans are being designed so that no building would be closer than 100 feet from the boundary of the Roberts estate.

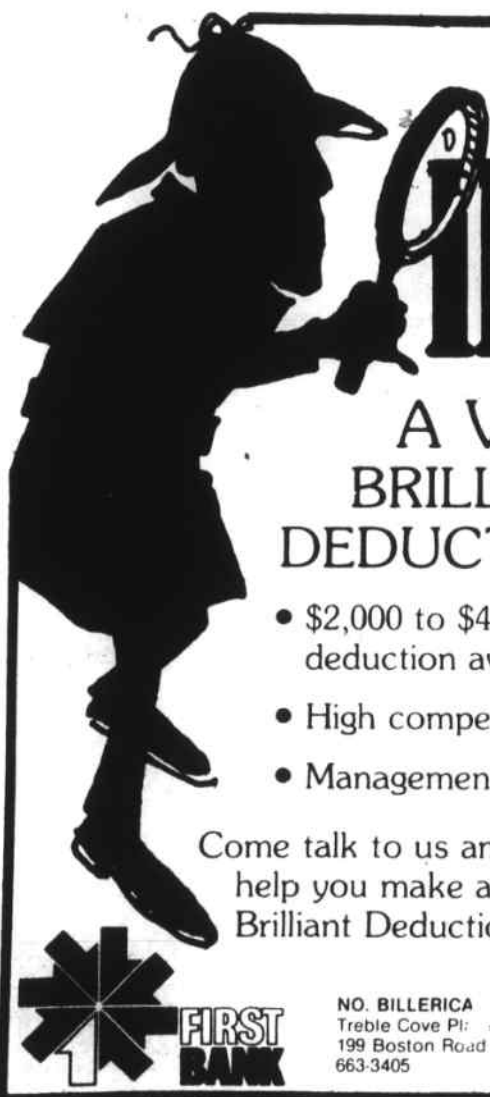

Free passes available at library

Looking for a special day trip at no cost during school vacation?

If so, you might want to take the whole family to the Boston Children's Museum. As of Saturday, February 16, a free pass good for four people will be available at the Wilmington Public Library. This brings to three the total number of passes available to Wilmington residents (The Children's Museum, the Museum of Science, and the Museum of Fine Arts).

The Museum Pass Committee wishes to express its appreciation to those four organizations who have contributed generously to the cost of this latest pass. They are the Shawsheen School PAC, the Wildwood School PAC, the Woburn Street School PAC, and the Wilmington Newcomers and Neighbors Club.

According to spokesman Pat Dennis, "we all have children and this benefits us all." Now, she said, they are continuing efforts to obtain a Boston Aquarium pass. Anyone wishing to contribute on an individual basis may take their donation to the Reading Cooperative Bank on Middlesex Avenue.

Wakefield's Don Young

Photography, friendship, freedom

By JIM ROUILLARD

He's caught the legs of cheerleaders and the strong right arm of a sports coach raised in victory.

He's hobnobbed with the king and the queen of the hoboes — and he's even captured high glee in the face of a 10-year-old boy wearing a seven-foot snake as a glistening, living necklace.

Wakefield's Don Young, professional free-lance photographer, is an artist in the truest sense: someone who strives to create in each of his photos something new, original, refreshing.

He's a man who loves the outdoors, and discovered early in his career that he could never be confined to a windowless office — yet he spends much of his time in the darkroom to bring his pictures to light for the pleasure of others: images of joy as well as of pathos and politicians, athletes, wildlife, and the winning smiles on children's faces.

Artists, the joyful ones at least, seem usually to be people who have somehow retained a piece of childhood: the magical, fresh view of the world which the early years hold — or ought to hold — for every child.

And somehow, Don Young still grasps that joy and magic.

He can make ministers look like movie stars — may even be able to accomplish the reverse — and still maintains in his attitude and art, that childhood is a time of wonder and discovery.

But it's not only children that he presents in new and original light. Somehow, the free-lance photographer from Wakefield's west side manages to seize on the wondrous in the routine — to cull the unusual or the amusing in a tiny detail of suburbia, from a weathered tilted by a sudden winter storm to the concentration of a Boy Scout trying to master a complicated knot.

Yet Don Young, who began his career as official student photographer for the Wakefield High School yearbook, "The Oracle," is his own worst critic, he confides, in discussing his work.

"Oh, there are dogs, too," he said.

"Sometimes I seem to shoot a whole game and come out with nothing that satisfies me," he added, in reference to his coverage of Middlesex County sports events for the Times-Chronicle Newspapers. His work also appears in Middlesex East.

Don said he will even look at his best shots sometimes, and say to himself, "Now, I should have done this different," or "I should have cut that out."

A lifelong Wakefield resident, Don received an eclectic education, involving both Catholic and public schools, though his family is Baptist. A graduate of Saint Joseph's School, he went on to graduate from Wakefield High (Class of '54) and Boston's Franklin Institute.

Don said it may have been his years at Wakefield's Saint Joe's which provided what his friends perceive as an early and easy tolerance of different outlooks. His love for scouting (which has proved lifelong) also came early, and his commitment remains strong to the values, breadth of friendships and opportunities which scouting can provide both youngsters and adults.

It was through a suggestion by Don, in fact, for a feature story about the Minuteman Council's Parker Mountain Boy Scout Reservation in Center Strafford, N.H., which led to our meeting last summer.

Parker Mountain was educational and impressive — and Don's good nature was unalloyed even when I dragged him off to a local blacksmith's forge to shoot some totally unplanned photos, which probably fractured Don's schedule for the day.

We laughed over the blacksmith's tale of a dog who somehow managed, with strange and expert use of teeth and claws, to pluck a local prize rooster clean of feathers and yet leave the bird still among the living.

The discovery of a mutual sense of humor and love of the mountains led to a later invitation for me to spend Labor Day weekend at Hart's Location, N.H., with Don and fellow Wakefield photographer and Parker Mountain Reservation Director Steve Maher. At Hart's Location, with the help of several scouts, Don had built a cabin of supreme comfort, a woodsman's delight amid the dramatic splendor of Crawford Notch, with his backyard the White Mountain National Forest itself.

Somehow I found something by getting lost that weekend. I drove off alone in the late morning, intending to pay a brief flying visit to just one more yard sale (an addiction Don shares — but he'd had enough that morning) and managed to get side-tracked in an azure and sun-tawny afternoon driving down the West Side Road out of Bartlett.

In that brilliant light, I had my first view of White Horse and Cathedral Ledges, rising like ancient, sudden paeans of granite above Echo Lake and the forests of Bartlett. And in getting lost driving alone through the beauty of the mountains, I understood what Don Young typifies: freedom and the capacity to translate, in his work, the variety, humor and richness of the world and the different people and events around us.

On the ledges that day I got lost talking with just such a variety of people, ranging from motorcyclists from Woburn and Stoneham, a young Englishwoman who'd emigrated to the States, and the husband she found in Maine, and an Army couple from Fort Devens who raise purebred coonhounds with an incredible length of "ear-leather."

But those are all stories for a purpose: to transmit what I discovered about Don Young — that he represents the tight discipline to his art which free-lancing demands as the price of freedom: readiness, perseverance, long hours, and very hard work.

And, the welcome Don Young created at Hart's Location is a simple reflection of his art — fused from an interest and joy that have helped forge his ability to transform his subjects from common, routine treatment, and catch the unusual in a ribbon-cutting, the unique angle-shot in a tiresome political debate, or the relaxed twinkle of a youngster at play, fishing, or accepting a trophy.

In Don's phrase, the purpose is for the picture itself to tell the story.

Now, it's impossible to write a story of Don Young without paying tribute to his parents, ARTIST WITH A CAMERA, Wakefield photographer Don Young celebrates a birthday today — and his photos are a celebration to the talent and true and patient eye of the professional.

IRAs—Everything you wanted to know

A few years ago, Congress enacted important legislation that enabled every working American to build a nest egg for retirement by establishing an Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Since that time, IRAs have become a household acronym and literally millions of investors are currently working toward tomorrow while saving on taxes today. Why should you establish an IRA if you haven't already and what should you know about them even if you already have?

Most investors are probably aware that an IRA is a personal retirement plan that offers the ability to set aside up to $2,000 for retirement each year. The amount of your contribution is tax-deductible and allowed to accumulate on a tax-free basis until you begin making withdrawals. What can this mean to you?

Suppose you fund an IRA with a $2,000 investment which yields 12 percent per year. Over a 30-year period, that investment (compounded annually) would grow to $540,585. If you invested $2,000 in a taxable investment with the same yield over the same period and you were in the 40 percent tax bracket, you would have less than one-fourth that amount ($125,976).

Anyone under age 70-1/2 with earned income (from salary, self-employment, commissions, fees, etc.) is eligible to establish an IRA. You can have an IRA even if you are covered by a corporate pension plan or if you're a federal or state employee covered by a government retirement program. You now can contribute to an IRA in addition to contributing to your Keogh plan or 403-b plan.

You can contribute as much as $2,000 a year to an IRA plan, as long as you earn that much. If you earn less than $2,000, you can contribute 100 percent of your income, a major benefit for part-time workers. You do not have to contribute every year. If you want to contribute less than $2,000 a year, you have that option as well.

If both husband and wife work, each can now contribute $2,000 a year to IRA; if one spouse does not work, an additional $250 can be contributed to a spousal IRA. The total ($2,250) can be split between the accounts of each spouse; no more than $2,000 can be contributed to the account of any one spouse. In the future,

Health Council wants to reduce size of maternity hospitals

The North Shore Health Planning Council (NSHPC), crystal-balling maternity needs for area hospitals in 1990, wants to reduce the size and capability of area maternity services by a total of 30 percent. This means eliminating 22 of the 74 maternity beds currently in service at New England Memorial, Melrose-Wakefield and Malden hospitals.

The Council has prepared its recommendations to the state health planning agencies in the form of its Plan for Acute Care Resource Allocation (PACRA). Included with the recommended maternity service reductions, the MSHPC also estimates that 40 of the current 70 pediatric beds in the combined service area will be "surplus" in 1990, as well as 210 beds out of the current 950 medical-surgical beds. Lawrence Memorial and Whidden hospitals are also included in the recommended cuts.

The maternity service reduction proposals are probably the most controversial of the recommendations — and the most damaging to New England Memorial Hospital and its maternity patients. Three years from now, it could mean reduction in beds, consolidation of the maternity service with another hospital, or even closure.

"The committee chose to defer the final action on Maternity for a three year period. At the end of that period, the three services will be reviewed and bed complements allocated," the proposed health plan states.

NEMH Executive Vice President, Landon Kite, says "Clearly, NEMH is the target of the moratorium. Future quality of service — and perhaps even the existence of the maternity service itself — is in jeopardy."

"The health plan is supposed to limit quantity not quality," Kite said. "We are not trying to increase the number of beds. We just want to maintain the high standards of what we already have in place."

Trivia

Sixty million Americans who spend more than a half-billion dollars a year on birdseed are doing it all wrong, say some wildlife experts. Like people, birds are often very fussy about what they eat, says National Wildlife magazine, and so much of the commercial birdseed mix sold goes uneaten. National Wildlife reminds bird lovers that different birds like different foods. For instance, blue jays prefer peanut kernels and woodpeckers prefer beef suet.

Don Young From S-1

chuckle (and, far more often, a hearty, uplifting laugh) each time I talk with her.

And though I never met Laurie Young, by all accounts a beloved friend to many in Wakefield and surrounding towns, a steeplejack and volunteer fireman, I talked with him once on the phone — and his good nature shone through that brief conversation like clear light.

In the movie version of J. R. R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings," the wizard Gandalf, also called Mithrandir by the elves, fell in battle in the mines of Moria.

When the elves learned of the wizard's fall, they composed a song to his memory which bring to mind the qualities I see in Don Young, and also envisage in his father Laurie, who died of a heart attack last September, just a fortnight after we returned from the mountains:

"Let the night never cease to call you;

Let the day nevermore be the same;

Though you've gone where we cannot find you,

In each heart you have set your name.

"Mithrandir, far you've wandered

And long may your name be sung

Through kingdoms of starlight

And realms of the sun.

"Mithrandir, rising through the shadow

Like a star shining deep in its home

You will dwell in our hearts forever,

Nevermore will we stand alone."

I've written about the father I didn't know and his son whom I've known half a year. Don Young has been mentor to many scouts, and I suspect, to many other people too, since he is always willing to offer caring, friendly advice when asked and encourage people to exert their own, true talents.

Though his work has in the past appeared in the Boston newspapers as well as locally, Don said he's seen the entire big city scene and much prefers the somewhat less frantic pace of his free-lance work in the suburbs.

Also in the past, he'd joined with other scoutmasters in leading scouts on several 50-mile hikes throughout the White Mountains, and he made those treks sound to me like journeys "through kingdoms of starlight and realms of the sun." And in contemplating that past time, he leaned back, looked around his comfortable lodge, and said that, during those hikes, he had never dreamed he'd one day own part of the wilderness he loves so much.

Soon spring will crack through winter's grip and new growth will herald what was for many pagans the celebration of the real new year: the promise of kinder weather and the endurance of earth's renewal.

One thing, however, certainly will endure, and that is Don Young's talent, as he continues to produce unique photos of humor, tragedy, action and beauty.

The research for this story provided some difficulty, for it had to be done on the sly — a surprise to its subject. It was one small way (with the help of several in a conspiracy of silence — and with particular credit to Steve Maher) for some of us to say to Don today:

Happy Birthday. You are indeed rich, in talent and in friends. And, like the wizard Gandalf, you will dwell in our hearts forever, and in the hearts of all who have witnessed your work.

Q. — If I buy articles in foreign "duty-free" shops before returning to the United States are they dutiable here?

A. — Yes, but they can be included in your Customs duty exemption because they were acquired outside the United States.

IRA From S-1

divorced spouses who have contributed to spousal IRAs will be able to contribute up to $1,125 to their own IRA, depending on their salary or alimony.

You may begin making withdrawals from your IRA without incurring tax liability at the age of 59-1/2. You must begin by the age of 70-1/2. Withdrawals are taxed as ordinary income while premature withdrawals are subject to an additional penalty tax of 10 percent. Assets remaining in your IRA, of course, will continue to grow on a tax-free basis.

Distributions may not be spread over a period longer than your life expectancy or the joint life expectancy of you and your spouse. They may, however, be spread over a shorter period. The IRS provides life expectancy tables to help you determine distribution amounts. Withdrawals of smaller sizes than the life expectancy tables dictate are subject to a 50 percent penalty tax. This penalty may be waived, however, if the IRS finds that under-withdrawal was the result of a reasonable error and that steps were taken to correct that error.

Stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit, limited partnerships — virtually any individual investment, with the exception of collectibles such as art, gold, silver or antiques, may be used to feather your IRA nest egg. What's more, you have the freedom to choose a new investment every year. As a result, you gain the opportunity to take appropriate measures as market and/or economic conditions change. For example, the higher rates offered by bank certificates of deposit one year may be unavailable the next. Or, this year may be a particularly opportune one to make an investment in oil and gas or a particular kind of mutual fund.

Your IRA should be the best it can be — this year and every year. That's why I recommend you familiarize yourself with the wide variety of investments available for funding your IRA. Choosing the one or more IRA investments that are suitable for you is not an easy decision, but it is an important one and should be based on the following factors:

— Your IRA investments can be as aggressive or conservative as you require. You can even divide your contributions among several investments to achieve a comfortable level of diversification.

— You don't have to contribute to your IRA every year. Some years you may decide you need the cash in hand and choose to skip your contribution. Remember, however, that your previous IRA contributions are still working for you and may be reinvested whenever you see fit. — The amount of money you'll have at retirement depends greatly on you. The more you contribute and the higher the annual return you receive on your investments, the more you will have in your account.

Whatever your economic outlook or attitude toward risk, IRA investments exist that are right for most everyone.

Losses on leases: Consumer alert on rentals ever-growing number of complaints from lease customers and advise you to investigate very carefully before signing a lease contract for a car or appliance.

What's the problem with leasing? The following are the major complaints.

1. Exorbitant prices: Many leasing contracts cost the consumer as much as 12 times what he would have paid if he bought outright. It is not uncommon for a lease on a television, stereo or other major appliance to wind up costing the consumer $1,000 to $2,400 — for an appliance costing $200 to $600 retail.

2. Hidden charges: Of course, the leasing company doesn't come out and tell you that they are charging you $2400 for a $200 television. In fact, the monthly payments themselves often look low (like the $50-month automobile advertisement quoted in the beginning of the article). Much of the real profit comes from the hidden charges, which may include: "deposits" (usually nonrefundable); "surcharges," such as for mileage on a car; delivery charges, and charges for "excessive wear and tear."

3. Difficulty in comparison shopping: Because so many of the costs of leasing are hidden in interest, deposit fees and all the rest, it can be tough to compare a lease to a sale. This can be a great advantage to the leasing company, which knows that $20 a week sounds less expensive than a lump sum of $1000.

4. Leases may not be covered by some consumer protection laws: Leasing companies claim that because they are leasing, not selling, that they are not covered by the consumer protection laws that protect purchasers from serious sales abuses. This is an important additional reason to be wary of consumer leasing: if you wind up getting burned, the leasing company may be able to successfully argue that ordinary consumer protection laws don't apply to your transaction.

How can you decide if leasing is right for you? If you are considering leasing a car or major appliance, be sure to follow these four steps before you sign the lease:

1. Figure out the TOTAL cost of the lease. Add up all the payments and all the charges for the entire life of the lease. Be sure you have gone through the entire contract and included every charge. This may take some time (don't expect the salesman to point out all of the charges to you) so don't try to do it in the salesman's office or while the salesman is at your door. If it's too much work to figure out the cost of the contract, you're probably better off buying on layaway, taking out a loan or waiting and saving for a while.

2. After you've figured out the total cost, call a handful of places that sell the product retail, and find out how their prices compare.

If you have further questions on a consumer lease agreement, call Robert Hobbs at the National Consumer Law Center, (617) 523-8010.

Winter weather wear and tear hard on cars

Record breaking warm weather accompanied by high humidity has created a good news-bad news situation for some motorists. While driving conditions will be less hazardous in most sections of the country due to relatively little snow, tens of thousands of motorists will have starting trouble.

The reason, according to Car Care Council, generally can be traced to dampness inside the distributor cap or on the wiring or spark plugs. Because electricity takes the route of least resistance, it is prone to follow a conductive route such as a fine crack in the distributor cap or rotor, along deteriorated spark plug wiring or along the outer surface of the spark plug itself. Dampness, dirt or grease accumulations spell trouble.

Corrective measures are rather basic, according to the Council. Be sure ignition components and spark plugs are up to specifications and dampness should create no threat to engine dependability.

Because the National Weather Service predicts continued wet weather through February, motorists are urged to be sure that their cars are in good condition. Starting failure continues to hold forth as the leading reason for emergency road service calls according to the American Automobile Association. Between 25 and 33 percent of car owners will have starting trouble this winter, with over half of these bung repeated experiences.

Preventive maintenance is the answer, says the Car Care Council, who says surveys show our nation's cars to be poorly maintained. In the state of Washington, the Approved Auto Repair Program operated by AAA reported on the results of 18,000 diagnostic van checks on cars throughout West and Central Washington.

According to Milt Harnden of the Automobile Club, nearly one third of the cars they checked had frayed, cracked or worn battery cables or faulty connections at the battery terminals. Nearly one out of three cars had defective or slipping alternator belts and 17 percent had faulty spark plugs.

he electronic diagnostic equipment carried by the van to evaluate an engine's efficiency showed 21 percent were incorrectly timed while 27 percent had overly rich carburetor settings resulting in wasted gas and unnecessary emissions.

Harden said that in most cases a tune-up would correct such problems, stating that the prime reason for the lack of auto maintenance has been the decline in the number of all service gas stations and therefore, the under-the-hood checks.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

Which of these three wonderful attributes is the most important for a person to have to be a well rounded individual - integrity, compassion or a keen sense of humor? When Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the great Industrialist was asked this almost similar question, what do you consider the most important in industry - capital, labor or brains, Mr. Carnegie's answer would apply to both of the above. He answered, "Which is the most important 'leg' of a three-legged stool?"

There is a battery of lawyers in my immediate family. I asked one of them for advice on filing a complaint about my wife throwing things at me, a habit she's had since the day of our marriage. "Woodchipper," I was asked, "why is it that after so many years it bothers you now?" "It's because," I exclaimed, "today is the first time she's hit me!"

My uncle John Shea and his buddy Rowan Fitzgerald read so much about the evils of drinking that they both gave up "reading." A neighbor of mine fell into a mixing vat in a brewery where he worked and drowned. His fellow workers tried to pull him out twice but he kept pushing them away. His wife, Maureen, had him cremated and the fire burned for six days.

While paying a bill in Woburn City Hall last week I saw a custodian on a stepladder in front of a wall clock. "Whatsa matter," I asked, "something wrong with the clock?" The gentleman looked at me, smiled and then said, "No, I'm a little near-sighted and I always stand on a ladder to check the correct time."

I brought a grandfather clock to a Reading repair shop. I had it on my shoulder and as I turned to go in the store I hit an elderly lady shopper. "Excuse me lady, I'm sorry," I said. "That's OK," she replied, "but why in the heck don't you carry a wrist watch like everyone else does?"

I didn't lose any time complaining to my paymaster that my envelope was two dollars short. He looked at the ledger then said, "you are indeed two dollars short, but look here, you were overpaid two dollars last week, why didn't you run over to tell me that then?" "Well," I meekly replied, "one mistake I can overlook and tolerate but not two in a row!"

There's a framed saying that has hung on our kitchen wall for years. It belonged to my mother and after any of my brothers or sisters returned from a trip or journey we would point to it and say, "That's right Ma." This is the saying, "You may travel North, South, East or West, but after all, Home is Best."

The Stoneham High gymnastic team set a new school record by scoring 105.2 but lost to Winchester's 110.9. The captain of the Stoneham team Natalie Greenwood, scored an overall total of 27.8. Some other members of the team are Angela Duplin, Michelle DeFlumeri, Jill Forgitano and Lynne Simonetti.

Well, captain Larz Neilson, you are not only a great Mariner, but also a great writer. Your article about WWII and New Caledonia brought back many memories of the South Pacific and I don't mean the movie with Enzo Pinta and Mary. Martin. The biggest surprise for me was learning that my personal friends, Paul Haggerty and Italo Galante were there. I've known Paul for over three years and have talked to him countless number of times, yet he has never told of New Caledonia or any other battles in the Pacific.

What a difference, my uncle John Shea will talk your head off telling you how he won the war almost single-handed. General Omar Bradley summed it up well when he said, "The Congressional Medal of Honor is not given for what one said on the battlefield."

My son Mark will make a real politician some day. He went into a card shop in Woburn and asked, "Have you a valentine that says, 'My love is for only you.' " "Yes," said the pretty young saleslady. "Good," replied Mark, "I'll take four of them."

Connie Johnson, of the Honeycomb Gift Shop in Wakefield, is a beautiful person. Her ready smile and spontaneous laughter reveals to me her inner beauty that is more precious than any external beauty could ever be. External beauty is like a flower that fades every hour - it's like my wife who went to the beauty parlor last week and for three days looked stunningly beautiful then, the 'mud' fell off.

It's income tax time again and the IRS has declared that, fishermen must include their "net," earnings in their returns. Almost everyone would like to win the Mega-bucks, make a killing in the stock market or inherit a great deal of money, however, remember if your 'ship' ever comes in you can rest assured that there will be an IRS agent on the pier to 'dock' it.

Frank Mazzoni of Wilmington said to me, "I read your column, Woodchips, every week. There should be a statue of you placed in our town park, that will certainly keep the pigeons 'off,' the other statues!" Frank, with

Developments in fibers and fabrics

An American preference for natural yarns is continuing. Fabrics of 100 percent wool, cotton, linen, or silk, and those made of blends of natural fibers are regarded by many consumers to be of high quality and worth a premium price. Ramie, grown in Southeast Asia, is often used in combination with cotton and other natural fibers. Widespread use of a cotton and ramie blend in imported apparel is a result of efforts to circumvent quotas imposed on cotton apparel. Blends containing natural and manmade fibers such as mohair and acrylic, or wool and acrylic, accommodate the market for more popularly-priced merchandise. Rayon is being promoted as a natural fiber to enhance its desirability. Used most often in blended yarns to add luster or to overcome its lack of wash and wear characteristics, rayon is often combined with mohair, acrylics, wool, and cotton and silk blends says Mary Williams, Home Economist with the Middlesex County Extension Service, in Concord, Mass.

These unique domestic products are more competitive with imports.

jokes like that you ought to go to Hollywood, the 'walk' will do you good! Take Joe Foley of Tewksbury with you, he'll make a great guide, he got lost in his own driveway last week. My cousin Howie Murphy of Reading would like to see a 'dead end' street in his neighborhood made 'one way.'

Every time a tree is cut down, a chemical factory is destroyed. A tree inhales carbon dioxide and gives off oxygen and that's what we need to survive. Every tree cut down because of driveways or houses being built

Scientists probe dinosaurs

For many years, scientists have pondered one of evolution's great mysteries: What happened 65 million years ago to cause the extinction of the dinosaurs?

Now there is intense scientific interest in a similar question concerning a much earlier time: What happened 190 million years ago that led to a profusion of dinosaurs so great that the giant reptiles spread throughout the earth and dominated the landscape for 125 million years?

ONCE RULED PLANET

Though the earliest dinosaurs had appeared in the last part of the Triassic, they had competed with many other creatures, primarily fellow reptiles, for food, space, and dominance. But by the early Jurassic, most of those competitors had vanished, and dinosaurs proliferated across the earth, growing both in variety and size, until they ruled the planet.

Signs of growing interest in this crucial moment in evolutionary history came at a symposium held here last fall in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Society of Vertebrate Paleontology, whose members dig out fossilized evidence of the past and try to explain what that evidence means.

When Kevin Padian, a University of California paleontologist who served as program chairman for the annual meeting, began to arrange the symposium, he thought that only a few of the more than 400 paleontologists attending the meeting would be interested.

To his amazement, Padian found that more than half of the 400 were interested. He had to find a larger room, which was almost filled all day as scientists from around the world presented 15-minute papers offering evidence of new finds and new theories to explain the vexing problem.

Both in his remarks to the scientists at the symposium and in an interview later, Padian attempted to explain this burst of interest.

"Work in this time period has exploded recently," he said. "In the last 10 years, scientists from a variety of fields have realized that we needed a whole new way of looking at the problem."

Much of their work has gone into re-examining previous fossils and the sites where they were found to determine more precisely when the animals lived.

should be replaced with another one. Not only for its future majestic beauty but for a selfish reason, so we can breathe pure invigorating air.

I started writing columns like this way back in grammar school. I remember my teacher, Miss Clare Sullivan, saying to me, "Always remember and never forget that the 'mighty oak' was once a 'nut' like you. Dennis Tully's parish priest said to him, "Its nice to see you attending church again. Is it because of my sermons?" "Not yours," Dennis replied, "my wife Kathy's!"

My cousin Maureen O'Donnell and her sister Mary were comparing notes on their teenage sons. Mary said, "I have to drag Bill out of bed every morning to get him to school on time." "I never have a problem with Tommy," said Maureen, "I just toss our cat into bed with him and he gets up right away." "How in the world does that work," asked Mary. "Well, it's simple, Tommy sleeps with his dog!"

At the time of the Triassic-Jurassic boundary, the earth had one supercontinent called Pangaea, so the location of fossil finds is less significant than their age. All the evidence suggests that the climate at the time was tropical or sub-tropical throughout the giant landmass, but climatological change has been suggested as another reason for the extinctions.

As with most such problems, especially those dealing with such a long-ago time, there are few definitive solutions. Still, scientists are devoting much study to what Padian calls "the biggest overhaul in vertebrate taxa" ever, in the hopes of finding answers to the key questions:

How fast did this occur? Did it happen all over the world at the same time, or did it happen in different places at different times? And, of course, the basic question:

What caused it?

Doll day divine

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

On Saturday, March 2nd, the Peabody Museum of Salem will be celebrating "Doll's Day".

In Japan, where this time-honored festival originated, the "Festival of the Dolls" is held annually on the third day of the third month.

The Festival dolls, which are given to each girl, are normally ceremonial dolls. They are a heritage which is handed down from generation to generation for display purposes at this holiday time. Parents delight in celebrating the "Festival of the Dolls" along with their children.

The Museum requests that, on March 2 at 10:30 PM, the children bring their favorite doll to the Education Room of the Museum to help celebrate this traditional Japanese holiday. Prizes will be awarded in the following categories: the most beautiful, the most unusual, the best foreign and the best loved dolls. To enhance the festivities, Japanese stories will be told and the Museum's miniature Royal Palace will be on display. Admission is $1.50 for children and accompanying adults will be admitted free of charge.

Based on nominations from state and provincial travel directors, the top 100 programs feature special holiday celebrations, music and cultural programs plus craft festivals, sports events, state fairs and technological innovations.

In Massachusetts, the two events chosen are the Boston Harborfest, which is an event-packed festival centered around Boston Harbor, July 2 to 7; and Thanksgiving at Old Sturbridge Village, including turkey shoot, fireplace cooking and various other events by advance reservation only, Nov. 17 to 22.

The Top 100 Events publication, co-sponsored by Days Inn of America and the American Bus Association, is available by writing: Top 100 Events c/o Days Inns of America, 2751 Buford Highway, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia 30324.

All 100 events listed in the publication are listed alphabetically by state and by date. The list of activities covers events in 46 states, the District of Columbia and seven Canadian provinces.

Among highlights: The voyage of the "Godspeed", in mid-July, a re-enactment of the 1607 voyage made by the original Jamestown, Virginia settlers and the Abbotsford, British Columbia International Air Show, to be held August 9 to 11.

On site babysitting is available during the workshops for the cost of $1.00 per child. For additional information and to register, call the Health Education department at NEMH - 665-1740, ext. 426.

Cape Cod ponders the cost of urbanization

By David Purcell
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

Brewster, Mass.

TWO years ago Middlecott Lane was part of a fairway on the Brewster Golf Course. Today, where sand traps once yawned, there are condominiums. Soon the 32 condos on Middlecott Lane will be surrounded by nearly a thousand others, all covering the rolling hills of what was, until recently, a golf course.

Notwithstanding the fact that "The Villages at Ocean Edge" are about as far from the ocean's edge as you can get on Cape Cod, the soon-to-be sprawling development exemplifies an increasingly serious challenge facing the Cape: How to manage growth.

Clearly, picturesque Cape Cod is changing. Once known for its "rural, seaside charm," the peninsula is sprouting subdivisions of retirement and vacation houses. Shopping centers and fast-food restaurants are going up nearly as quickly. All that growth is putting pressure on the Cape's resources.

Esther Snyder, executive director of the Association for the Preservation of Cape Cod (APCC), says the Cape's charm, natural resources, and history need to be guarded. "If the Cape is overdeveloped," she points out, "it will lose its very value."

"People come to the Cape because it's different," she says. Her group is working to preserve "the kind of Cape Cod we feel is a state and national asset."

Ms. Snyder says she is not an advocate of "no growth." But, she explains, her organization is supporting a move toward "caring growth."

The APCC released a report last week entitled "Options for Cape Cod's future." It lays out questions and proposes an agenda for handling development issues on the Cape in coming years. The report says that although the Cape's building boom over the past 15 years has been dramatic, "the dimensions of growth over the next 16 years are enormous."

On page one it states: "In fewer than 20 years, it is likely that there will be more people on Cape Cod in the summer than live in the city of Boston."

Year-round residents will number almost 216,000 by the end of the century, the report predicts, as opposed to fewer than 150,000 in 1980. The summer population will swell from about 375,000 to just under 500,000 over the same period, it says.

The irony is that the Cape is not actually overbuilt. Nor is it nearing its saturation point, says Ms. Snyder. Although some of the resources on this fragile peninsula are being taxed to the utmost, there is a lot of undeveloped land.

Only one-quarter of the land is built up. Another quarter is held in public lands such as the Cape Cod National Seashore. So, theoretically, half of the narrow peninsula could be paved over.

And that is just what so many do not want to happen. The APCC is not just concerned with limited water supplies or snarled traffic. The group is also concerned about intangibles, such as the character and look of the Cape and the quality of life for year-round residents.

Ms. Snyder says the zoning laws of towns on the Cape will not slow growth. Neither will limited water resources or traffic jams. But, she says, it's time for action. "We've lost a decade in terms of population pressure," she says. "We're running out of time."

Residents of Brewster have recently taken steps to manage growth in their town.

To a resident of Boston or Hartford, Brewster's year-round population of 6,500 might seem minuscule. But Brewster has been one of the fastest-growing towns in Massachusetts for the past decade, with a growth rate approaching 200 percent. As recently as 1970, the town had only 1,800 year-round residents.

Robert A. Sawtelle, one of Brewster's three selectmen, says that for years the town had "a low population and plenty of open land."

For years the minimum size for a building lot was 15,000 square feet, or about a third of an acre. Recently, town residents have voted to raise the minimum to 25,000 square feet, then to 40,000, and finally last year to 60,000 square feet per lot — just under an acre and a half.

"The [building] density will be restricted so that we aren't overbuilt," Mr. Sawtelle says. The golf course development, The Villages at Ocean Edge, is sure to be the last big project in this town.

But Lawrence B. Doyle, another selectman, says, "You can only go so far in putting up lot sizes." Rezoning has clearly not solved all of Brewster's development problems.

At an acre and a half, lots in Brewster sell for between $30,000 and $45,000. "A lot of people can't afford to live here now," Mr. Doyle says. And that has created a situation that many people never expected to see on Cape Cod, he says, homeless families and individuals. Because there is so little public housing available on the Cape, the state welfare department is putting the homeless up in motels this winter.

Doyle says town officials "are honest enough to say that we don't know what to do [to manage growth on the Cape]." The APCC has offered several suggestions — the first being that towns coordinate their efforts.

Ms. Snyder says many issues — such as water quality, garbage disposal, and traffic — transcend town boundaries. "Some of the Cape's problems must literally be solved at the regional level," she declares.

Since Barnstable County is Cape Cod, she says, it makes sense to have a county government with some authority.

In December, a bill was filed in the state legislature to authorize creation of a charter commission. It would draft a charter to give the county government legislative authority and the power to levy taxes. The charter would have to be approved by Cape voters.

The process will take a lot of time, Ms.

New houses in Orleans crowd the natural beauty of Cape Cod National Seashore (left). How many people, summer and winter, can the fragile peninsula tolerate?

'If the Cape is overdeveloped, it will lose its very value,' says Esther Snyder executive director of the Association for the Preservation of Cape Cod.

Snyder says, but "I think the voters are ready."

The intent of the charter movement is similar to that of a proposal by Brewster selectman Sawtelle. He has suggested to his counterparts across the Cape that all town boards and groups that deal with development coordinate their efforts.

Sawtelle says the Brewster Conservation Commission should work with those in other Cape towns, as should zoning boards, sewer commissions, and planning boards.

"The thrust is to get the 15 towns to go in on anything and everything having to do with growth," he says.

Because there is so much undeveloped land on the Cape, the APCC also suggests that towns buy up as much of it as possible in order to preserve natural areas.

Recognizing that this can be quite costly for towns with 5,000 to 10,000 residents, the association recommends instituting a land transfer tax, similar to one enacted in 1983 on Nantucket, where a fund has been established for buying up beachlands, marshes, and moors. Much of the money for this fund comes from a 2 percent tax on the purchase price of land transfers. Ac-

Northshore Samaritans seek help for suicide prevention

The Samaritans is a international volunteer suicide prevention organization founded in England in 1953. There are Samaritan branches all over the world. The first American branch was founded in Boston in 1974. The Samaritans of the North Shore became an incorporated branch in July 1983.

Last year, 1984, there were

2,182 calls from distressed persons and they were made by 230 different individuals. The youngest caller was 13 years old and the oldest was 75 years of age. Thirty-one percent of the callers were in the age range of 30 to 40 years old, while nine percent were younger than 20, and five percent older than 60. Callers were almost equally divided between men and women, and almost half of the callers discussed suicidal acts or thought during the first call.

Calls were answered with great concern and complete confidentiality by trained volunteers of the Samaritans of the North Shore. Potential volunteers to help respond to the increasing number of calls will be trained in the next week of February. Call 744-5000 any day after 5:30 P.M. for information about the class and about registration.

According to Dr. Brian Strassnick, President of the North Shore Samaritans, there are presently 29 active volunteers working with the Samaritans of the North Shore. Every day from 5:30 P.M. to 7:30 A.M. and by April 15th, it is hoped that the Samaritans will provide 24 hour coverage seven days a week.

No special background or education is required to be a Samaritan. People from all walks of life are involved. After 6 three hour classes and 10 hours of observing they are ready to answer the phone saying, "Samaritans, can I help you?"

Winston Churchill's memory was so fine that he could repeat verbatim a lecture or a whole Shakespearean play.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Rochele Flynn

"Witness"
"Mass Appeal"

"Witness." Starring Harrison Ford, Kelly McGillis, Lucas Haas. Directed by Peter Weir. Produced by Edward S. Feldman. Screenplay by Earl W. Wallace, William Kelly. Rated R. (brief nudity, violence, profanity).

Witness will come as a pleasant surprise to those of you wondering whether Harrison Ford can do more than just look tough. Not only can Ford act, but he retains his popular gruff countenance without turning into Hans Solo every time he pulls out his gun.

This killer/thriller has an interesting twist to it; a it ties the meed Amish folk of Pennsylvania into a tale of corruption and murder. Director Peter Weir does something that Alfred Hitchcock was famous for. He sets the action hurtling into motion, and then takes off down his own private path. In this case, an innocent 8-year-old Amish boy, played convincingly by Lucas Haas, is the only witness to a brutal murder in a train station. Harrison Ford is the detective on the case who must help the boy identify the murderer, but also protect him when things get out of control. Ford, the boy and his widowed mom (Kelly McGillis), disappear into the Amish countryside and Weir puts away guns and corruption for wheat fields and barn raisings.

It is during the peaceful setting of farmlands and domesticity that the movie flourishes. Weir captures the time warp that the Amish exist in with absolute reality and without drippy romanticism. Even the love story aspect that develops between Ford and McGillis is treated with common sense, as both realize that they come from different worlds, and nothing can change that. It is refreshing to note that Weir did not fall for the silly sentimental trap that Hollywood usually expects when there is a love element in a film. Film buffs will want to note that the overtly nasty narcotics officer is none other than Danny Glover, from "Places In The Heart." And, yes, that is the Russian ballet star, Alexander Godunov, giving a wonderfully convincing performance as McGillis' hopeful suitor.

or intensity needed to play someone in crisis.

On the other hand, Lemmon, who does have the range and talent to play a troubled priest, did something that this reviewer never thought she would see — he appeared to be acting. He still gives a fine performance, but it lacks the spontaneity and depth

ALEXANDER GODUNOV makes his motion picture debut as Daniel Hochleitner, a simple Amish farmer whose peaceful life is disrupted when a Philadelphia cop takes refuge in his community during a murder investigation in Paramount Pictures' "Witness."

"Mass Appeal." Starring Jack Lemmon, Zeljko Ivanek, Charles Durning. Directed by Glenn Jordan. Produced by Lawrence Turman, David Foster. Screenplay by Bill C. Davis, based on his screenplay. Rated PG (profanity).

Mass Appeal, a vehicle for the talents of Jack Lemmon and Zeljko Ivanek, has its moments, but generally did not transfer well from stage to screen. The story of an older priest confronting his values and a young renegade studying for the priesthood is too predictable and too preachy.

There definitely are some fine moments in this film, but the laughs are reached far more easily than the dramatic moments, which are strained. This is due partly to the fact that Ivanek, the young deacon desperately trying to become a priest, is about as interesting as white bread. This young man simply does not have the range that he is known for. Perhaps he simply couldn't respond to the lackluster script, and neither should the audience; wait until Mass Appeal is on cable.

"1984." Starring Richard Burton, John Hurt, Suzanna Hamilton. Directed and screenplay by Michael Radford. Produced by Simon Perry. Based on the novel by George Orwell. Rated R (violence, profanity, nudity.)

1984 is a depressing movie, which says a lot for it as the book was depressing too. Director Michael Radford produced a realistic account of George Orwell's novel, and it has a truly effective impact, mostly due to the bleak settings and oppressive blue and gray colors that dominate throughout.

John Hurt gives a magnificent performance as a man singularly trying to fight the subjugation of a society where free thoughts and sex are crimes. Hurt is gaunt, haunting and a perfect foil for the fresh defiance of Suzanna Hamilton. Most eerie of all are the mellifluous tones of Richard Burton, which help to disguise the evils of Big Brother.

Although an excellent film, 1984 is not uplifting by any stretch of the imagination, not for children and not to be seen if you are feeling blue.

ZELJKO IVANEK AND JACK LEMMON star as Mark Dolson, and idealistic young seminarian, and Father Tim Farley in "Mass Appeal."

Cape From S-9

cording to the APCC, this is raising about $2 million a year.

The APCC projects that $5 million might be raised annually on the Cape from such a tax system. That is hardly a lordly sum when it comes to buying up large parcels of land, yet the association says it would allow towns to buy up particularly worthwhile parcels of land while they are still available.

A third recommendation of the APCC's report is that each town hire a professional planner. Traditionally, Cape towns have relied on volunteer planning boards for community planning. But the APCC says the rigors of considering large condominium proposals, whole subdivisions, and commercial development can overtax such boards. The solution, says the association, is to have professionals running the show — something only one in three Cape towns has at present.

Ms. Snyder says "ground-water management is the big issue for the Cape." The water supply is sufficient to meet present needs. But every Cape town receives its water from the same underground aquifer, so the threat of pollution is the significant concern. The APCC recommends that towns strictly enforce laws and procedures regarding septic systems.

The Cape has made significant progress in recent years in dealing with its garbage. Most town landfills are expected to fill up within 10 to 15 years. There are few parcels of land available on the Cape large enough to be used for dumps in later years. And since it takes eight or more years to find and develop an alternative site, or find other ways of getting rid of trash, it appeared the Cape towns were close to the crisis point. But several towns have entered into contracts with a waste recycling company that will burn the trash to produce energy. Other towns are expected to follow suit shortly. It will still be a number of years before the plant is in operation.

A third problem that is unavoidable for any summer visitor to the Cape is its traffic jams. The APCC holds out little hope that the Cape will sprout new highways or widen and straighten its present roads. The report says the greatest hope for alleviating the traffic congestion lies in the judicious use of mass transit. And though there is little hope of obtaining a federal transit subsidy under the current administration in Washington, the APCC does see potential for a comprehensive mass transit system, using buses to link Cape towns.

Science In Our Lives

Softening Scars

Traditionally thought of as a teenage problem, acne is an almost inevitable part of growing up. Scars caused by acne, however, can have a lasting effect on personal confidence and self-esteem.

Fortunately, today's dermatologists can correct or soften most acne scars. Some physicians use a sanding process called dermabrasion to smooth the skin's surface. In other cases minor surgery using punch transplants can help correct the pit-like scars. To treat soft, pliable scars, many dermatologists have turned to injectable Zyderm® Collagen, a highly purified natural protein. This nonsurgical procedure, known as Zyderm Collagen post-acne treatments, is performed in the doctor's office. The collagen is injected just below the skin's surface to gradually raise the scar to the level of the surrounding skin. Of course, only a qualified physician can determine the appropriateness of each procedure for each individual.

San Francisco dermatologist Dr. Marshall Goldberg reports a significant change among his patients as their acne scars become less noticeable. According to Dr. Goldberg, the change comes in two stages.

"First, they begin to have a sense of pride in their appearance—a completely new feeling for some of them. Then, a few months later, they have another realization. They see that their self-confidence is causing other people to respond positively. And then they really blossom!"
